

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE B-12

THE WASHINGTON TIMES
18 OCTOBER 1982

DIANA HEARS

QUIET PLEASE. . . Honestly, you beg them to stop, but they will keep gossiping about Life At The White House After The Election. Hot scenario right now has Jim Baker, Chief of Staff, and Ed Meese, Presidential Counselor Extraordinaire, both gasping to be attorney general. Naturellement, there's only room for one. The other will end up holding the Bag of Power over at the CIA or the Pentagon. Jumping into Jim Baker's shoes: Bill Clark a.k.a. The Judge, passionately trusted as National Security adviser right now. And that, darlings, leaves at least two contenders elbowing each other for the NSC spot: Fred Ikle, the undersecretary of defense for policy, and "Bud" McFarlane, currently Clark's deputy. Mesdames et Messieurs, fait vos jeux.